

Boys, Girls---Fly

Aviation Is Woman's Game as Well as Man's Says Amelia Earhart—And She Has Proved It

By HELEN WELSHEDER

TAKE to the air. Some day you may be flying fame. For aviation is a woman's profession as much as it is a man's according to Amelia Earhart, the first woman to wing her way alone across the Atlantic ocean.

But the way up is long and hard. And it happens to be pretty much a man's sky at present.

"Few if any women do commercial flying today," the daring aviator asserts. "But at the same time no woman runs a professional air pilot's business to serve as engineers. Several factors have retarded women in piloting. Few of them have the necessary 1000 hours which will permit them to qualify for commercial work. They have a much more limited opportunity to fly as men do. The army and the navy have training schools that are open to men. Then, too, boys are able to work as mechanics before they are training. They obtain experience as well as earn part of their way. Girls can't do this. They have to pay for their lessons outright."

Boy Air Students Have Advantage

Courses of instruction forget that there are a great many things about ground work that girls do not know. They have picked up at the corner garage. Girls would know the same thing if they could land in the same places and learn the mechanical end. As it is they don't understand terms that are second nature to boys. Boys would be in the same predicament in a cooking class. It doesn't mean that girls haven't the inherent ability to learn these things. They just haven't had a chance.

"Even the ships are built for men. Some small girls could use three and four engines and get a height. Then, too, a girl obtains a license who has the expense of waiting around for a job."

If there were as many women in the sky as there are men, they wouldn't receive as much credit for their feats as they do. Mrs. Putnam believes, but at the same time their crack-up wouldn't have as much publicity.

"When a man cracks up, no one pays any special attention," she says. "But, oh, when a girl does, it's all over the papers."

Muscular control and mental control go hand in hand as necessary qualifications for a successful woman pilot, she believes. Any activity in which co-ordination of mind and body have featured will help you learn flying.

Mrs. Putnam, who has a tall figure with her career blind, too, is familiar to every American girl, hopes that femininity will get some bumps when women pilot their own ships.

"Such things as fainting at a sight of mice are passing away. Such belittles used to be a feminine characteristic. Women are often accused of being 'silly.' I think that their contact with commercial life will overcome that."

Wanted to Prove She Could Pilot Trans-oceanic Plane

As for her own adventures, the 14 hours when she had the sea below and the sky above and fog clouds all around—she didn't try it because she wanted to fulfill an aim. She just made up her mind, one day a few months ago, that she knew how to fly blind now. She thought it would be fun to see what she could do on the ocean.

But I didn't say much about it for fear something might interfere with my plans. I had helped the other girls in their attempted flights and hoped that they would make it. I wouldn't have cared if they failed. But I've been realizing lately that it always irked me that the danger conditions were such that I couldn't do any of the piloting the other time I flew alone. I don't know enough about piloting to risk it. I thought that this would make up for that."

She studies her weather maps— hops off from Newfoundland—lands safely on Irish soil—how hailed by London crowds— and even tho'th's, welcome

Angelo dragged him in safety in a short time, stayed with him all night.

Angelo was decorated for his courage, but learned that there is little acquisition to decorations.

He was in Washington, looking for a job or payment of his bonus, and it became the duty of Major Putnam to drive Joe Angelo, who is an aviator, out of his Washington quarters in Camp Marks.

CALLING on the army to turn the camps of the "honor army" and drive the veterans out with cavalry, machine guns, infantry, tanks and gas attacks will supply what is called "extreme radicalism" with text for many a day.

Calling out the army has happened rarely in Washington. It occurred during the "Whiskey Rebellion" in 1794, and can happen here after only by direct order of the president.

THICK-NECKED men and the connected kind, with no sense of duty, "Women must not vote, because they lack the courage of men."

They vote now, and every day prove that they have more courage than "men."

You realize it, when you read about Mrs. Earhart, crossing the Atlantic alone, or the two lady pilots, Mrs. Maclellan, of Scotland, and Mrs. Phyllis, of the Baltimore, going up to beat the women's national flying mark of 120 hours.

Women's real every-day courage is not recognized.

WESTERLY in the thick traffic of Lafayette street, New York, a middle-aged woman sat alone, dodging heavy trucks and his fast cars, sitting in a little "bath tub" car, of a three-wheeled motor-cycle. A boy of sixteen drove it, another younger boy sat back of his brother, talking to his grandmother.

She pointed out the interesting sights and queer people passing by, turned her head, skimming at high speed within a few inches of the wheels of the cars.

It is a perfectly safe, grandma, and, for her, it was perfectly safe.

Her arm, pressed against her, had taken her place for the real estate that she passed on her swift career at all the great centers of the world. Had insured her. But her grandmother had said it was safe, and so it was safe. She was back, and an old-fashioned grandma, who she live long, to defy the fates.

AMERICANS have been assured women their rights, or the sacred marriage tie, but certain young American hoodlums have been shot, right next to jail for long terms, on no pretext or weaving could save them.

FOURMING KING MULE, killed out of Portugal by subjects of monarchy, goes home to be buried there, carried on a ship with the Portuguese flag at half-mast. No country objects to the presence of a dead rat.

When Napoleon's body was brought from St. Helena, to be buried under the gilt dome of Les Invalides, on the edge of the Tuileries, the enthusiasm was so great you might have thought he was an Italian, instead of an Italian from Corsica. He was said, "If he had been French, he would have been step in the Tuileries that night."

JEAN MORIERIA, veteran French front-line officer, defeated the German Vines, the Vines in a woman's champion today.

MEMORIAL TO THOSE ASLEEP AS UNKNOWN

Prince of Wales to Lift Shroud on Archway at Thiepval

ARRAS, France, Aug. 1.—Bearing the names of 34,000 Royal Air Force men who have no known graves, the Empire's memorial to her lost flyers was unveiled Sunday by King Marshal Trenchard.

A vast crowd of week-end pilgrims and soldiers gathered here to honor the memory of husbands, sons and sweethearts who fell in the struggle of 1914-18. Here, after the unveiling, they read the names of officers and men whose resting-place can never be found.

Prayers were offered by the Bishop of Arras, Lord Trenchard and the Mayor of Arras.

This Quip Given One Big Laugh

OTTAWA, Aug. 1.—During a lull at the convention of the unemployed here today, the chairman announced a meeting of the resolutions committee.

The announcement was greeted in stony silence. Then, one of the men in the front row said: "Did you say resolutions committee or revolution committee?"

The question brought down the house.

VON PAPPEN'S CABINET TO HOLD RULE

Hiltner's Chances of Being Raised to Power Go Glimmering

By LOUIS F. LUKATEL Associated Press Staff Correspondent

BERLIN, Aug. 1.—The German people brought to an end a bloody election campaign today with a forthright refusal to entrust the fate of the nation to any one of the 21 important political parties of the Reich—not even to the Nazis of Adolf Hitler.

This means the new so-called "neutral cabinet" of Franz von Papen, with the strong shadow of General Kurt von Schleicher behind it, probably will continue to rule Germany.

But the brown-shirted little Nazi, who promised the voters he would rule Germany, has been repudiated by the voters.

He was yesterday, gained a tremendous victory, compared with his standing in 1930.

HILTIER SEATS

Hiltier will hold 22 seats of the 360 seats in the Reichstag, whereas he held only 107 in the 1930 Reichstag.

But Hiltier's strength represents 30 per cent of the entire vote. It is the only party he could lead.

He is a coalition, and he is not permitted not to do that.

Thus was written the final act of the electoral campaign in the history of the Weimar Republic.

More than 100 dead were left in the wake of the election.

Confab Hears First Note of Discord

SOUTH AFRICA ENVOY TAKES SHARP ISSUE

Havana Shows Figures to Prove Where Balance

Trade Lies
By GEO. HAMILTON
Canadian Press Staff Writer
OTTAWA, Aug. 1.—The Empire conference opens a critical week with the first note of open discord. Hon. N. C. Havenga, leader of the South African delegation takes courteous but sharp issue with the statement issued by the British delegation Thursday.

"These comments are offered," says Mr. Havenga "in a caring and unassuming spirit but in a frank effort to see the trade relations between the two countries in their proper perspective. They will place it on record that South Africa has never objected to the treatment its commodities have received at the hands of Great Britain; it has neither complained of the spirit manifested by the United Kingdom in matters of trade, nor has it ever questioned the fact that preferential treatment was not always reciprocated."

CLEAR PERCEPTION
The Union has always had a clear perception of the different circumstances of the two countries and the categorically imperative duties owed by each to its domestic industries and other vital interests.

The South African statement holds that the primary function of the conference is to conduct an examination of the primary functions of the two countries and the categories whereby members of the community can co-operate in extending mutual trade. "It is submitted," the statement adds, "that this object is not best served by a statement such as that under consideration which implies the trade of the dominions with Great Britain and consequently reflects a favorable trade balance for the dominions."

POINTS TO CONSIDER
Here are a few points from the South African statement:
If figures are examined in their proper perspective, the balance of trade is definitely in favor of the United Kingdom.

Table 2 of the British statement (which analyzes British imports from foreign countries) shows the dominions (respectively) do not truly reflect the Union's absorption of British goods, nor the increasing market which it has offered those goods.

The Union would be almost reasonable or unnatural in South Africa's position being subjected to duties in the market of the United Kingdom for the protection of the domestic produce of the latter.

WELCOME PREFERENCE
The Union would welcome preference for the dominions over foreign produce.

The British statement on visible balance of trade "is not a true reflection of the position as between Great Britain and the Union."

Table 3 of the British statement (which analyzes British exports to foreign countries) shows the dominions (respectively) do not truly reflect the Union's absorption of British goods, nor the increasing market which it has offered those goods.

NY GOVERNOR STARTS DRIVE FOR PRESIDENT

First Speech Delivered Emphasizes the Tariff Situation

ALBANY, N.Y., Aug. 1.—Launching his drive for the United States presidency by making his first speech since his acceptance address at Chicago last July, Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt Saturday night emphasized his belief economic relief is the main issue in the forthcoming election campaign.

Governor Roosevelt criticized the United States tariff which he said made it difficult for debtors nations to meet their obligations through trade channels.

"Great Britain, France and Germany have at least agreed among themselves concerning reparations," he proceeded. "The danger now is that they may turn a united front against us. This can be avoided, not so much from the debtors' side, as from our barriers against their trade which make the problem so difficult. The debtors will not be a problem, we shall not have to cancel them—if we are to have a revolving fund in which payment is possible through the profits arising from the rehabilitation of trade."

Fear For Safety Of North Flot

CHURCHILL, Man, Aug. 1.—Concern is felt here for the safety of Pilot W. J. Buchanan, noted "Barren Lands" flier, who left here Wednesday for Caribou Post and has not been heard of since. He was accompanied by a mechanic in a large air freighter.

The distance by air is 400 miles and Buchanan is expected to be back in two or three hours. They have carried wireless but no radio have been picked up from it. The Caribou Post is a small settlement and had one or two possible landing places between here and Caribou Post.

"It is suggested that a discussion of these lines take place as soon as possible."

PEACE RIVER, Aug. 1.—Slipping out into the stream with his outboard engine, pilot Murray N. P. Murphy and his son, Cyril, better known as "Buck", commenced their long journey into the barren lands at 1:30 Saturday night. They were on the bank bidding farewell to the people who have been going out for the northern hinterland where they remained constantly having made their first outfit trip early in June, remaining in Edmonton for two weeks. They were only been at home for six weeks but time is short for getting into their barren lands home where they are expected to remain only for one year.
